Brylen Homes Remodels Business to Accommodate Increase in Renovation Work

Tuesday, February 19, 2008

Homeowners are showing an increasing interest in making enhancements and improvements to their current homes, according to recent statistics from the National Association of Homebuilders (NAHB). Northeast Florida homebuilder Brylen Homes is leading the trend in this regard, having established a flourishing remodeling division that continues to capture the attention and praise of local homeowners.

"We earned our reputation as a custom home builder, but the remodeling side of our business is certainly growing as demand for this type of service increases in Northeast Florida and around the country," said Bryan Lendry, president of Brylen Homes. "We are committed to giving our clients the kind of high quality design and construction they want, whether it's in a new home, a custom-ready residence or an enhanced version of their own home."

The NAHB reported its Remodeling Market Index (RMI) in December. The RMI, which measures remodeler perceptions of market demand for current and future residential remodeling projects, increased several points between second quarter 2007 and third quarter 2007.

Consumer interest in home remodeling has grown in popularity due to the many benefits this specialized area of construction provides homeowners. Residents who love the overall comfort of their current home and community can opt to remodel and stay where they are. Besides being a prudent investment, remodeling affords residents the opportunity to create a home that precisely fits their needs and desires, with custom features that may not otherwise be found in today's real estate market.

Brylen Homes treats its home renovation requests with the same hands-on approach and attention to detail it employs for its custom home creations, according to Jeff Tabb, vice president of Brylen Homes. The company has overseen many remodeling projects in Northeast Florida ranging from the construction of an over-the-garage bonus room to highly customized projects such as a 3,000-square-foot detached guest house with garage.

Large or small, each remodeling project utilizes the same qualities that have made Brylen Homes a leader in the field of custom home construction. Each project boasts distinctive character and unique detail, built with some of the market's most valued materials and finishes.
